SOME SHOOTIN'

It took all kinds of brave men to help tame the Old West. You could make a list of the specific tasks that each of them did. It would include the Indian scout, the soldier, the settler, the law man, the doctor, the missionary, the cowboy, the road builder-just to mention some. And if you had to assign definite names to the people concerned, there is always the danger you might forget to mention a very important person. However, as long as memory of the Old West lasts, the name of John Scollins the Indian Scout will be high on the list.

He had one great advantage over other Indian scouts: He could think and act like a redman when the situation so arose. Or he could be perfectly at ease in Washington with congressmen as he talked over the Indian problem with them. As a boy he had been a captive of the Sioux for a period of five years. And finally was released in a bargaining deal. He was then adopted by Captain and Mrs. Thomas Scollins and given a good education. However, the army was quick to see the advantage it would have with such a man serving in the armed forces.

This particular story concerns the efforts of the Peace Commission sent from Washington to see if it could keep Chief Flying Eagle from going on the war path. Even the decade after the War Between the States still saw the Indian for the main part armed with his traditional bow and arrow; his lance; his knife and tomahawk or war hammer. In fiction you give him the rifle to fight with. But actually he had a handicap with the rifle: His limited supply of ammunition. Which meant he didn't have any to spare for practice. He never used a reloading outfit. His rifles and revolvers he obtained as "spoils of war." His most efficient weapon was the bow and arrow. Especially since he now tipped his arrows with metal. It may come as a surprise to you to learn that there were traders who sold these metal arrowheads to the Indians!

Scout John Scollins was asked to go with General Frank Cooke to a "pow-wow" in the Indian Territory. The General was head of the Peace Commission. In order to demonstrate the power of the army in the field, several soldiers with the new repeating rifles were sent along with the Peace Commission. They fired at targets and the Indian Chief was unimpressed.

"I show you what my braves can do with their arrows," was his defiant statement to the General.

From a variety of positions, his braves sent a barrage of arrows at a designated spot. Almost like a rain of arrows falling from the sky.

"If we fight, we can wipe out your soldiers," pointed out the Indian Chief.

"If we fight, we can wipe out your arrows in the sky," suddenly remarked Scout Scollins. "I will show you."

Needless to say everybody was surprised. The Indian Scout marked off an area. Then asked that five Indians stand at a given distance from him and shoot arrows high up into the air. He then took his rifle from its scabbard and loaded some shells into it. At a signal the Indians shot their arrows up into the air. And as they started to fall to earth-and rather closely at that-the Indian scout began firing with his repeating rifle. He smashed the arrows before they reached the ground. Then he made his own challenge:

"I will fire bullets into the air. See if you can hit them with your arrows!"

As one brave pointed out, you couldn't see a bullet in the air. The demonstration made its impression upon the fertile mind of Chief Flying Eagle.

"The Indians know there is a time for peace and a time for war. We will sign the treaty."

In his report to the President of the United States the General gave complete credit for the success of the mission to John Scollins. "I still can't believe any man can shoot that way," said the officer.

"No man can shoot that way," grinned the Scout." At least not with regular bullets. Those were buckshot loads in my shells. How could I miss?"

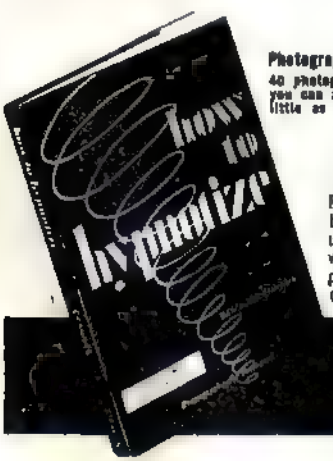
How to HYPNOTIZE

ENTIRELY NEW METHOD

Until recently the process of hypnotic induction was largely based on trial and error methods which succeeded mainly with subjects who were highly susceptible to hypnosis in the first place. The truth is that these highly susceptible subjects make up a very small percentage of the population. That is why amateurs and beginning hypnotists have so often been disappointed in their attempts at trance induction. Now, however, recent scientific research has developed ENTIRELY NEW METHODS that are not only sure fire in their results but quick and easy to achieve! For the first time, these new methods are presented in HOW TO HYPNOTIZE in language that you can easily and successfully follow on the very first reading!

SHOWS YOU STEP BY STEP

This book — which has been acclaimed by doctors and psychologists — is guaranteed to give you all the know-how necessary to induce the trance state in others. It not only explains the latest discoveries in hypnotic induction, but it shows step by step, move by move, exactly how to bring on the trance; how to transform the trance into deeper and still deeper states, and how to terminate the trance quickly and effectively without any dangers whatsoever. You are even given alternative methods, so that you can actually chose the one that suits you best.



Photographically Illustrated
40 photographic illustrations show how you can achieve trance induction in as little as 90 seconds!

USED BY DOCTORS
The book that is being used by doctors and psychologists to learn hypnotic induction is now available to you
